A message from ExxonMobil Basestocks

We have all seen significant impact to our industry these last few months — from the beginning stages when the pandemic first took hold, to the deep challenges that unfolded as the weeks went on, and now, as we see the early stages of recovery in various parts of the world.

We understand the challenges so many of you have faced, both personally and professionally, and we are here to help you meet the needs of the changing business environment.

Our first priority continues to be keeping our employees, operations and communities safe. In parallel, through the strength of our integrated business, global manufacturing footprint and robust supply chain, we remain committed to continuing to meet your base stocks and specialties needs during this unprecedented time.

We are in this for the long term, and we thank you for your business.

Sincerely,

David Parsons

ExxonMobil Global Basestocks and Specialties Sales Manager
